

MULTIFAMILY MARKET OVERVIEW

LYLE CHAMBERLAIN, President

Vacancy rose a bit in this last quarter over the past three quarters, but pricing also rose, and with more than 3500 units under construction, both are expected to rise a bit more. The new units are a result of a rising population and job market regionally, along with an extremely underserved market at the end of the last recession. I expect that with the rising interest rates causing some diminishing consumer confidence, the population growth should lessen, but with the strength of the jobs market, we should be able to take care of the new units under construction along with the higher pricing they will demand. I expect growth to slow a bit here, but overall, this market to stay very healthy.
