

OFFICE MARKET OVERVIEW

JR BITZER, Principal

Denver's office market continues to face headwinds and uncertainty. First it was the pandemic, and now the looming pressure of a slowing economy and possible recession. Smaller companies continue to make up the bulk of the leasing activity, while larger ones shed office space with the weekly announcement of layoffs becoming all too common. The amount of sublease space in metro Denver has hit a record 6 million SF. While the office market struggles to find its footing, the institutional sales market has ground to a halt. The limited amount of sales in the quarter, were small private capital transactions.
