

RETAIL MARKET OVERVIEW

MACYN SCHOLZ, Director of Research

The Bank of Canada increased the policy interest rate this quarter to 5% and Canadian inflation was up to 4% in August. This quarter was also marked by more shocks to the economy including the port strike and wildfires, but most importantly consumer spending is down. Early estimates from Statistics Canada for this quarter suggest weak spending in the GDP numbers. With less disposable income due to high mortgage costs and wages not keeping up with inflation, consumers in Canada are cutting back on purchasing. Despite deceleration, the retail market in Metro Vancouver remains resilient. Robust demand for space paired with a vacancy of 1% keep Vancouver as one of North America's tightest leasing markets.
