

Q4 2023RALEIGH, NC

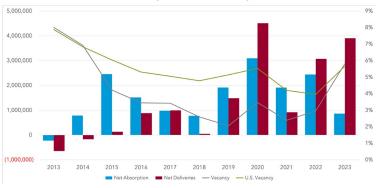

INDUSTRIAL MARKET OVERVIEW

RYAN LAWLER, Senior Director

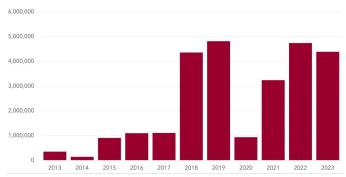

Availability of land, lower-cost power, logistics infrastructure, favorable business environment, highly educated and skilled labor, help place North Carolina in the top three states leading the U.S. in sheer numbers of major future manufacturing developments. However, during 2023, demand and absorption were below Raleigh's historical average. In 2023, rent growth slowed, 3.8 million SF of new inventory delivered, prices leveled off, sales were small. Currently blended rent is $11.70 SF, which is higher than rents in Southeastern peer markets, attributed to the number of life science properties and research and development facilities. Another 4.7 million SF, planned to deliver in 2024, will expand existing inventory 4.5%.
